BIOGRAPHY

Darcy is an experienced litigator whose practice focuses on representing commercial and governmental health plans in proceedings before federal and state courts, administrative agencies, and arbitral forums. She represents health plans in complex payor-provider disputes involving, among other things, contractual payment terms, as well as out-of-network rate disputes. Darcy has successfully represented health plans in administrative proceedings before the California Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) and in enforcement matters before the California Department of Managed Health Care (DMHC). She advises clients on state and federal civil investigative demands and has experience defending plans in litigation proceedings involving alleged violations of the federal and state False Claims Act. Darcy also has experience defending commercial entities in class action lawsuits alleging unfair/unlawful business practices. She has briefed health care issues for the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and the California Supreme Court as counsel for amicus curiae. Darcy possesses a well-rounded background in all facets of civil litigation, from the initial pleading stage, through discovery, law and motion practice, settlement, trial, and on appeal.
